As many as 10 member-companies of the World Castor Sustainability Forum (WCSF) have decided to produce sustainable castor seed. These companies would be in a position to offer sustainable castor oil in the world market during current year itself.

In this regard, 30 representatives from members of WCSF were trained in 'Sustainable Castor Production' as trainers at the 'Training of Trainers' (ToT) workshop in Ahmedabad during June 21-23.

A media statement said the programme was aimed at advancing sustainable practices in the castor industry.

WCSF's ToT programme brought together industry experts, stakeholders, and trainers to delve into key principles crucial for sustainable castor production. Participants engaged in discussions gaining insights into innovative techniques and strategies that promote ecological balance, enhance community engagement, ensure effective governance, and optimise agricultural productivity.

Hosted under the objective of 'Empowering Sustainable Futures', the three-day event encompassed comprehensive training sessions and interactive farm visits, fostering a robust dialogue on environmental stewardship, social responsibility, governance, and agricultural best practices. The attendees interacted with farmers and witnessed sustainable practices in action. A mobile app designed to streamline WCSF's operations was released on the occasion.
